Saci was happily wandering through the forest when he spotted three children hiking. Curious, he decided to follow them silently. Suddenly, one of the children sensed a presence and said, "Someone is following us!" The adult replied, "It's nothing; just birds."

Saci kept trailing the group, letting out soft, mischievous chuckles. Another boy heard it and warned, "I heard laughter in the woods!" But the adult quickly answered, "It must just be the call of some unusual bird." The mischievous Saci laughed even harder at the confusion.

Wanting to play more pranks, Saci took a secret shortcut through the trees and darted right in front of them. A little further on, a boy saw round footprints on the ground and pointed at them in surprise. The adult smiled and said, "It must be another child who passed by before us."

Finally, everyone reached the mountaintop to watch the sunset. From up there, the three children looked back and saw—amidst the trees—the figure of a one-legged boy wearing a red hood. They were delighted and waved goodbye to him.

While the adult gazed at the scenery without noticing a thing, Saci waved back with a big smile on his face. He waved a friendly greeting from the woods, happy to have been spotted by the observant children and to have received a wave in return.

Night fell gently, and the trail ended at the park entrance. The three children walked hand in hand, gazing at the stars and whispering excitedly, "Do you think that boy was Saci Pererê?"
