Laura was a very curious little girl who dreamed of growing up quickly. The reason? Her mother would always say, "You can't go out at night—it’s dangerous! The 'boogeyman' might kidnap you." All she wanted was to see the moon.

One night, Laura snuck into her father’s secret laboratory and discovered a time machine. The invention sent only a person’s "ghost" (consciousness) into the future, while their physical body remained safely tucked away inside the machine.

Without a second thought, she traveled to the year 2050. Upon encountering her adult self, she decided to follow her around.

She noticed that no one worked anymore, as robots handled everything—even delivering delicious food straight to people's homes. 🤖

People spent their time solely on fun hobbies. The adult Laura had become an incredible painter!

Robots took care of all the cleaning, security, and the production of everything the city needed.

As night fell and the adult Laura headed home, a robot police officer stopped her and said, "You can't go out at night—it’s dangerous! Malicious AI-powered robots might kidnap you."

At that very moment, her time ran out, and the machine brought Laura’s consciousness back to the present. With a worried look on her face, she thought, "Wow... I’ve heard that line before! Changing the time period didn't change a thing."
